April marks World Autism Acceptance Month. One of the key things you can do to understand Autism is to recognise that the autistic spectrum is not a single line from low to high; it is a complex combination of many overlapping characteristics. You can watch this video.

Here are five simple steps you can take to support World Autism Acceptance Month. If you'd like to work in a role in the future that supports people with Autism, here is a guide that can help you to explore different job roles.

Apprenticeships are an alternative path into a career in theatre, offering a different mode of training that can work better for some young people and also help the sector tackle skills shortages and widen access. This interesting article on thestage.co.uk features those in the know talking more about this route into the industry.

Join the NHS Health Careers information lead on 8th May at 3:30pm for a whistle-stop tour of all things health careers. The session will provide an overview of roles, entry points, apprenticeship and graduate opportunities, job vacancies, useful resources and latest trends/changes.

The Black Achievement Conference takes place on 17th May and is exclusively for Year 12 students of black heritage who are interested in finding out more about what LSE has to offer. The conference will showcase the achievements of the black community at LSE.

LSE Explore is a series of online subject taster events taking place in May 2025 which offer an insight into selected undergraduate degree subjects at LSE. Students will receive taster lectures, hear from student ambassadors and receive top tips for making an application to study at LSE. Applications are now open and you can apply here (apply by 27th April).
